Anti-Bullying

Implement a multi-modal approach to proactively addressing bullying by raising awareness, providing effective responses and intervention strategies and a system for using data to track bullying behaviors to effectively reduce its occurrence.

Bullying has long existed, but has only recently been recognized as a pervasive problem in schools across the nation regardless of size, location or the composition of student enrollment. Thirty percent (30%) of U.S. students in grades six through ten are involved in moderate or frequent bullying either as bullies, as victims, or both. Studies show students that are most affected by bullying experience a complexity of psychosocial distresses. Additionally, by its nature bullying has a detrimental effect on the positive learning climate of a school. Bullying reports have fueled an increase in public awareness as well as legislative action. A growing concern for implementation of appropriate prevention, monitoring and effectively addressing bullying occurrences has become a priority at both the district and state levels.
